Dear Doctor,

Arrhythmia management continues to be one of most rapidly developing fields within cardiology. New treatments and novel approaches to the control or cure of many cardiac arrhythmias are being offered in tertiary care institutions such as St. Luke's and Roosevelt Hospitals. In this course, new pharmacologic and non-pharmacologic therapies for atrial fibrillation and updated guidelines for cardiac resynchronization therapy, resuscitation, and syncope will be discussed.

The OBJECTIVES of this continuing medical education activity have been developed so that, after attending this conference, attendees will be able to:

- Review new pharmacologic therapies available to prevent stroke in patients with atrial fibrillation
- Appreciate the impact of revised practice guidelines on the evaluation and management of patients with unexplained syncope
- Determine the appropriate role for catheter ablation in patients with atrial fibrillation
- Examine the clinical utility of cardiac resynchronization therapy in patients with early stage heart failure
- Identify the new recommendations for cardiopulmonary resuscitation
- Recognize important electrophysiologic phenomenon through the electrocardiogram

Please plan to join us for this informative session.

Jonathan S. Steinberg, MD

Suneet Mittal, MD
